Glasdon 'Beacon' Gatehouses

Problem Identified

Jaguar Cars Limited in Birmingham recently underwent a major overhaul of their incoming goods procedure.

As well as redesigning road layouts and other traffic controlling solutions, there was a requirement for a number of gatehouses to house security personnel.

The Solution

There were a variety of criteria that Jaguar required their gatehouses to comply with:

- The minimum of site disturbance during installation.
- Minimal future maintenance costs.
- High levels of insulation and comfort for the personnel manning the security posts 24 hours a day.
- Good visibility.
- Projecting their corporate identity.

Glasdon were contacted and our Sales and Technical teams set to work meeting the criteria.

Various building systems from the Glasdon range were considered and the Beacon system was chosen as the perfect solution.

Resulting Benefits

The Beacon range of modular buildings are manufactured with maximum user-comfort in mind. An attractive internal finish combined with insulation levels which can exceed those of a modern house, provide the ideal working environment for security staff.

The comprehensive modular system offers optimum levels of visibility whilst the option of colour coordinated panels and powder-coated framework meant Jaguar could project their corporate identity with maximum impact. These features were complemented by the GRP finish to the panels meaning the gatehouses will continue to look their best with the minimum of maintenance.

Once the factory assembly work was complete, Jaguar carried out pre-delivery inspections before the gatehouses were delivered with the minimum of disturbance and time spent on site.

WHAT THE CUSTOMER SAYS:

Mr Mike O'Shea of Jaguar Cars Limited was very pleased with the Beacon system and commented:

" We cannot fault Glasdon's approach. We described what was needed and in return they supplied a first class product.

This was combined with a first class pre-delivery, installation and post-delivery service.

Nothing was too much trouble and overall we found Glasdon very flexible and their product to be very good value for money. "
