SWITCHGEAR HOUSING

Problem Identified

Kronospan Limited, manufacturers of wood panel products, were undertaking a substantial upgrade programme at their site.

They identified a requirement for a housing to be used as a switchroom in an area restricted by other plant and equipment. The main criteria was that the housing could be installed temporarily, then divided into two sections and relocated at a later date to accommodate progressive site developments.

The Solution

Mr Christian Mulrooney, Group Civils Projects Manager at Kronospan, contacted Glasdon and a site visit was made by their Area Sales Manager to discuss the project in detail.

The Garrison housing range was selected as the ideal solution for this application, as the modular GRP construction allowed for the manufacture of a special two part housing that could be delivered and craned into the confined location with minimal site disruption.

Resulting Benefits

Within four days of the Garrison Housing being delivered to site, the internal equipment was installed and operational.

The versatility of the Garrison system will allow Kronospan Limited to split the switchroom into two sections and relocate one of these sections to another area on their site to accommodate switchgear for a new project. At this final stage, additional modular panels will be incorporated to enclose the two sections.

WHAT THE CUSTOMER SAYS:

Mr Christian Mulrooney, Group Civils Projects Manager at Kronospan Limited, commented:

“Glasdon provided a quick and effective solution to the major problem of relocating our switchroom whilst we carried out extensive development work in that area.

Being able to relocate all or part of the Garrison housing has proved to be very cost-effective from the outset and with Glasdon providing the housing ahead of schedule we were able to keep the project on track.

With various projects in the pipeline, we will make Glasdon our first port of call for all future equipment housing applications.”
